

The United States Mint 1998 Uncirculated Coin Set

Own a piece of History From the United States Mint

George Washington's image has appeared on the quarter dollar since 1932. The now familiar portrait of our first president, sculpted by John Flanagan, was issued in commemoration of the two-hundredth anniversary of our first president's birth. It replaced the quarter dollar that featured an image of Liberty, the female personification of freedom. Now, the United States is about to change the quarter dollar again. Moreover, 1998 dated quarter dollars are the last that will be minted with the familiar heraldic eagle reverse until at least 2009. (Beginning in 1999, a series of five quarter dollars with new reverses will be produced each year through 2008, celebrating each of the 50 states.) Obtain your Uncirculated Set now -- its price remains unchanged at only $8.00. And remember, this Set is also the perfect way to introduce children to the joys of coin collecting.

The 1998 Uncirculated Set: ...celebrating the end of an Era!

For over 50 years, knowledgeable numismatists have been eagerly adding these splendid Uncirculated Sets to their personal collections. Moreover, they've been buying extra sets as gifts for friends and family--an ideal way to inspire new generations of collectors. And now, with the "final" Washington Quarter Dollar an integral part of the 1998 Set, there's all the more reason to buy extra sets-- for yourself!

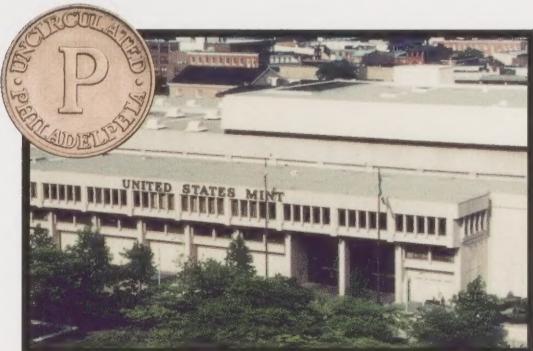

These rich and pristine reflections of our Nation's heritage come directly from coining presses at the U.S. Mint's Denver and Philadelphia Facilities. In addition, each of the two individual sets of five coins arrives with its own emblematic mint mark piece -- produced from the same blanks used to strike Lincoln Cents. These symbols of quality add depth and drama to your collection, and are intriguing focal point for new collectors.

This Uncirculated Set may be your last chance...

The year 1998 is the final year that the Washington Quarter Dollar with its traditional eagle reverse will be issued until at least 2009. Obtaining your Uncirculated Set now means you will own the last of these familiar uncirculated quarters, -- worthwhile and historic additions to any collection!

Introducing the 50 States Commemorative Quarter Program

Beginning in January, a series of five quarter dollars with new reverses will be produced each year through 2008. These coins will celebrate each of the 50 states, and will be issued in the sequence that the states became part of the Nation. The first five states, in order, are Delaware, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia and Connecticut. A complete list is on the back of this page.

America is about to enter a new numismatic era. Don't miss the final opportunity to add the Uncirculated Washington quarter dollar to your collection.

Office of the Director
United States Mint
Washington, DC 20220

Dear Collector:

A 1998 Uncirculated Coin Set... the set that's anchored your collection since its first days... the set you've given many times as gifts... the set that shares your love of our hobby with children and grandchildren... awaits your order.

When your set arrives, an era in American numismatic tradition comes to a dramatic close.

Next year we will launch the most anticipated numismatic event of this century by producing the first circulating commemorative quarters honoring each state. Each quarter, five per year for ten years, will bear its own distinctive reverse. United States quarters will not feature a heraldic eagle reverse again until 2009. It appears in the 1998 Uncirculated Set for the final time during the 20th century.

You know the importance of owning these coins. We know you'll order extra quantities of the 1998 set and that you'll want them quickly. So we're speeding orders by priority mail, and we're paying the postage. The set remains $8 for the sixth year.

Fifty-one years of tradition end with the 1998 Uncirculated Coin Set. Another thousand begins.

Please give us the pleasure of filling your order right away.

Sincerely,
